Through the efforts of Harvey Shantz with the help of others a bee is being organized for the graveling of the road to the cemetery.

The graveling of this road is a community affair and it is thought that many citizens of both town and country will be willing to help. A number of truckers have already offered their services and the trucks but volunteers are wanted for shoveling both at the pit and on the road. It can be made light work if enough men will volunteer.

Volunteers are asked to register with J. V. Berscht—remember it's Wednesday, June 24th for the graveling bee.

Exhibition of Work at Didsbury School

The exhibition of work by Home Economic and Industrial Arts Classes which was held on Thursday evening gave the public an idea of the splendid and useful work that is being done in these classes.

The girls in the home economics class had a very creditable exhibition of sewing and fancy work and the style show displayed the proficiency of many of the girls in the art of dress-making. Tea was also served by the girls during the evening.

The exhibition of the industrial art classes showed some splendid work in the wood working section which ranged from book ends to some excellent pieces of finished furniture, while the work on the lathe had produced many beautiful samples of work.

A novel piece of electrical equipment made by the students was an electric weiner roaster and the principal, Mr. Ford, seemed to get quite a kick out of roasting weiners and serving them to the visitors.

The large number of visitors attended, and their complimentary remarks must have given much satisfaction to the students and their teachers, Miss Aylesworth and Mr.

A Growing War Effort

SOME INTERESTING figures regarding the returns to the Dominion treasury through the channels of direct taxation were recently given to the House of Commons by Finance Minister J. L. Ilsley. The increase to the national revenue from these taxes for the year ending May 31, 1942, was $317,200,000. Mr. Ilsley described this figure as "startlingly tremendous." He further stated that while this increase was due in part to an increase in the rate of taxation, an upward swing in general business conditions was also a factor. Analyzing this figure, Mr. Ilsley showed that personal income tax for the year ending May 31, 1942, would show an increase of $105,100,000; national defence tax $86,900,000; and excess profit tax $155,200,000.

Trend Of Business While production of luxury goods in Canada has been widely and rapidly curtailed, there has grown up a large defence industry, which is taking up great quantities of material and providing employment for large numbers of workers. In a recent survey of business conditions in Canada, published by the Bank of Nova Scotia, it was stated that employment in industrial plants had increased thirty per cent. in the last year, and sixty-two per cent. above the levels just prior to the outbreak of the war. The same report says that there was a material increase in gross farm income during the past year. Cash income from the sale of farm products during 1941 were placed at $876,000,000, an increase of 18½ per cent. over 1940, and the highest since 1929.

Increase Of Farm Products Since the outbreak of the war farm living costs have increased five per cent. and the cost of production has risen. Nevertheless there has been an increase in the output of agricultural products to meet the rising requirements of war time. While returns to the farmers are not as great as the gross increase suggests, there has been improvement in some branches of the agricultural industry. The production of metals and forest products also show great increases, and these figures all tell the story of an ever-expanding war effort within our Dominion, which is yearly absorbing greater quantities of our material and human resources. Now that the initiative has been seized by the United Nations on most of the fighting fronts, it is to be hoped that the offensive spirit will gather strength. It should make itself felt by the renewed determination of all Canadians to provide the money necessary for the support of the men in uniform.

The Individual Citizen's Army
A Weekly Column About This And That In The Canadian Army.
By Alan Maurice Irwin

"Canadians must supply more tanks, more guns, more men, more bombers, more rifles." You have heard public speakers reel these sentiments off time and again and audiences stamp and cheer and, let us hope, dash off to buy more War Savings Stamps and Victory Bonds. Well, so long as the audience reacts that way why should anyone worry?

And yet there is a worry there. It's the grouping together of machines and men.

It's bad psychology. It illustrates too well the Colonel Blimp type of thinking.

What right has a politician to think of men—your son or brother or father or husband or sweetheart—in the same breath as machines?

We can sweat and sacrifice and save to "supply more tanks, more guns, more bombers, more rifles."

We can and we must!

But it is not our sacrifice or our sweat when the men go. That is theirs and we have no right to be smug and complacent when they volunteer no matter how close we are to them or they to us.

You'll hear the same type of speaker say, "Mrs. Blank in my constituency has given two sons to the Army."

Mrs. Blank hasn't given her sons to the Army. They weren't hers to give. Let us rather say that Mrs. Blank gave her sons the character that made them ready to offer their services, perhaps their lives, to their country.

But don't let us class them with the machines that are being built to aid its soldiers by the Individual Citizen's Army!

The men who put on their country's uniform when that country is fighting for the existence of the Christian world do it for the same reason their fathers did. There is no burning fire of patriotism in them, no inward, silent sound of Kipling's lines, no proud thought of sacrifice, no strong call of duty. They put on the uniform because they are men and men fight to protect their own and preserve their heritage.

They don't get into uniform because politicians or preachers or jingoes or Colonel Blimps tell them it's their duty—neither should we who are not permitted to wear uniform need to be "needled up" to put our backs into backing the soldiers up.

"Not permitted to wear uniforms." But we are! we are permitted to wear uniforms of our own design and manufacture. We can wear uniforms represented by turned coats, by frayed cuffs, by lack of frills to save cloth for vital needs.

We can wear uniforms by walking to save gasoline, by abstaining from candy to save sugar, by wearing old clothes, eating plain food, by buying two War Savings Certificate stamps instead of going to a movie.

That way we can be privates in the Individual Citizen's Army and it's a lot harder to be a good private than a good general.

That way we can supply the men in uniform with "more tanks, more guns, more bombers, more rifles."

The farmer who patches up an old hoe, the housewife who makes over an old dress, the school-boy who walks sedately past a good slide to save wear and tear on his boots (or maybe the seats of his pants) is supplying more machines to the troops.

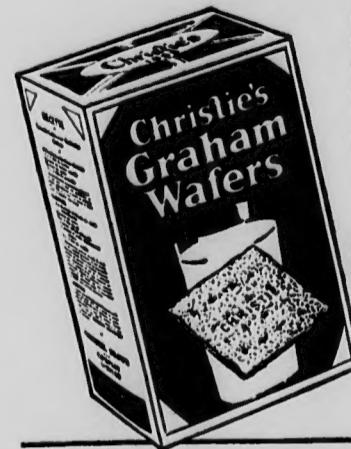

Those are the thoughtful people. What about the thoughtless ones?

To be thoughtless these days is to be unpatriotic—and to be unpatriotic these days is close to treachery.

Perhaps we should drop fancy language these days, perhaps we would better understand what harm thoughtlessness can do if we were

Britain's Wartime Restrictions Being Carried By The People With The Greatest Stoicism

London, (CP)—The front line has moved right into the Briton's home in this war and now, in what once was the Englishman's castle, wartime restrictions are more onerous than those of the army.

Virtually everything but a deep breath comes under some sort of Government restriction and there is not even the comforting knowledge that these controls will end with the coming of peace.

Rather, authorities have made it plain that such burdens as food rationing must go on for some time after the war is over. The same can be said for the so-called "austerity" clothing regulations, the fuel cuts, and restricted use of travel facilities and motor conveyances.

Certainly not gleefully but undoubtedly with stoicism and determination the Briton has borne up under one restricting order after another until now, in the late Spring of 1942, this people which went through Dunkirk and the heavy blitz raids, present a picture of indestructible firmness.

Certainly too there is evidence on all sides, in the Commons and in taverns, on buses and trains and on the streets, of a growing feeling in the public mind that this voluntary regimentation must not be for nothing; that the time is near when all that the people are doing at home for the war must crystallize into something important offensively soon.

Just in the first few months of 1942 things have become much tougher as the Government puts more and more steam behind the war head; calls on the people to bend more and more energy to the war program; takes steps to eliminate waste of man and womanpower in all age brackets and in all circumstances.

Next winter's chill will tell just how onerous the new fuel restrictions are but for the present the food problem is the most tiresome of all regulations governing life on the home front. Those in the services at least have their food provided for them but the private householder must stretch the rations to fit the appetite and go through the interminable bother of purchasing from restricted supplies.

After the First Great War food rationing continued for nearly two years. It was not put into force until late in the war. This time authorities have made plain the people should not expect any earlier relief.

The Food Ministry says frankly: "Those who are dreaming of the armistice in terms of unrestricted supplies of 'a joint and two vegetables' must wake up to the hard facts."

The need for restoring basic stocks to feed European countries at present over-run by the Nazis and the bottleneck" which reduced shipping due to war losses will have created in distribution, will necessitate a lengthy post-peace period of restriction and organized distribution of food in Britain.

Henceforward Britons, held down to a minimum of purchases for clothing, must wear the type of "austerity" garments designed by the Government as a war measure. Just another in a long line of controls all of which have the same end in view—victory.

For a start the British citizen saw butter portions shrink to tiny pats. The bacon allowance shrivelled to a few rashers a week. Fresh meat in small quantities became only a once-a-week affair. Bread changed from white to deep tan overnight as the national loaf of whole wheat flour came into being to conserve shipping space.

Private motor cars were banned from the roads to conserve gasoline. The citizens income underwent such stern taxation that little remained after purchasing life's necessities except for those of considerable means and then the Government stepped in with its general mobilization to say how the Briton should spend these days of war.

The son of the house was taken first, either for the army or a war job, in all probability the army. Then the daughter was called, either for the auxiliary services or a war factory job.

The wife was next, called on to undertake part-time work and for the man of the house it has become his job to cultivate his garden in his spare time, perform military drills and fatigues, collect his scrap and never travel except when absolutely necessary.

And now, while there is no compulsion about it, the Government is "calling up" the nation's dogs, organizing their use on a large scale for guard duties and message carrying to save manpower.

Authorities have given notice they want Alsatians, Collies, Lurchers, and crosses between them, Bull-Terriers and Bull-Mastiffs. The Government pays transportation costs for dogs from their homes to or from the training school or subsequent place of employment and on completion of war service the dog is to be returned to its owner.

Wasteful Habits

Saving Now Practiced Should Be Continued After The War

When the country's very existence is at stake, waste must have much more serious results than in peacetime. It has become a more comprehensive term and is defined by the Citizen's Research Institute as meaning under present conditions "the avoidable use of labor and materials for purposes other than war."

But it is to be hoped that, when the day of victory over the forces of evil comes, there will be no return to the recklessness which we are being forced to abandon, temporarily at least. The "intelligent saving" now practised by all who realize that with it our whole future as a free nation is bound up, is something that a country cannot ever fail to cultivate except at its peril.—Edmonton Journal.

High Commissioner

General Odulum Has Travelled Extensively In Australia

Major-General Victor Odulum, Canadian High Commissioner to Australia, since his arrival in the Commonwealth has travelled extensively over a large part of the continent. Already he has visited many parts of New South Wales, Victoria and Queensland and, with the full co-operation of the Canadian Trade Commissioners, L. M. Cesgrave and Frederick Palmer, has seen military, financial, commercial and educational leaders.

General Odulum is making few public appearances but inquiries show he has already won great appreciation in the highest federal and state political circles for the value of his conferences and "off the record" speeches at many gatherings in the three states.

The High Commissioner's next tour will be to Western Australia, which is as far from Canberra as Vancouver is from Ottawa.

Managing Director Frank Brown, of Canada Western Cordage Company, told the annual meeting of the Fraser Valley Fibre Flax Growers' Association that his company was prepared to establish a spinning mill at an ultimate cost of $250,000 if flax production in the Fraser valley reached adequate volume and the government establish a necessary scutching mill.

Mr. Brown said he has already written to Minister of Agriculture K. C. MacDonald and the post-war rehabilitation commission on the project.

(By Eric Dennis)

Charles Penrose of Southampton is 71 years old by his birth certificate and a great grandfather, but to officials who ask his age in the merchant marine he's but 59.

The reason he gives: "If they find out how old I really am they might not let me go to sea and if I have my way about it I'm going to die on the briny deep."

In The Salvation Army hostel which he picked to stay at while in port because "it's so friendly," he's known as "Pop". Call him "Grandpop" and you'll find him swinging at you with a wild entanglement of rights and lefts.

"I'm just as young as some of these kids in their teens when it comes to doing my part. Don't call me an old man," he warns.

For 51 years Charlie has been on the sea and has gone through three wars. In the more than half a century he has had only three close escapes. One was a torpedoing in the last war. His ship, a British tramp, went down in the Mediterranean and he spent a day adrift before being rescued by a French warship. One time before that, he had to put to a lifeboat when his ship collided with another vessel in the English Channel. The third was the shipwreck of the Turret Bell off Cable Head, Prince Edward Island.

The five-foot-four sailorman whose tousled grey hair juts out from under his cap, cocked at a 45-degree angle on his head, has long ago lost count of his mileage on the waves.

"Blimey, ol've given that up long ago—why ol've crossed the Atlantic 16 times in 1911 when I was on the old Mauritania," he explained in a Cockney accent.

However, he figures he must have travelled the distance around the world in his days more than 300 times. He has sailed into every seaport in the world except those in Japan.

"And when we lick the Huns and the Japs, I'm going to get a ship that will take me there so I can say I've been to them all."

He has spent his entire career at sea as a donkeyman and greaser or in some other part of the stele-hold.

For several years he worked aboard ships in the Great Lakes, making Port Colborne his home port. He also wintered one season in Montreal.

"Pop" Penrose's home is still standing he hopes in Southampton despite heavy raids on the port. His five children, his grandchildren and great grandchildren also make Southampton their home. Two of his sons went to sea for years but have since "swallowed the anchor" and are now working ashore. His five grandsons, however, are carrying on the Penrose tradition of seafaring, the family calling which goes back to the time the first ships sailed out of Britain, according to the veteran seafarer.

"I was born, bred and buttered on the sea and I want to die and be buried there. I've got 25 or 30 years left in me yet. If I hadn't have gone to sea I would have been dead years ago matey."

The World of Wheat

By H. G. L. Strange

NATURE'S MASS BIRTH

Of all the seasons in the farmer's year, summer best gladdens the heart; for now springs to the eye the first evidence of Nature's ever recurring "Mass Birth"; tender young shoots of plants, trees, vines and shrubs reaching upward to eventual fruit and harvest, young life joyously frisking and gamboling on yet unsteady limbs, but hourly gaining strength and nourishment from rich milk flowing from the dam's distended udders; milk itself but young grass transformed by nature's mysterious alchemy into a more precious essence; and grass in turn given growth by moisture first lifted high by the mighty forces of nature from the never ending seas into vast cloudy receptacles, then blown by the winds of Heaven to the far corners of the Globe and dropped onto the eagerly waiting fertile lap of mother earth; so starting the cycle of life once again on its great annual course.

The farmer's part in this destined sequence of nature's marvels, is with care, patience and skill to utilize these natural phenomena so that the fruits of it shall be food needed for sustenance by the world's teeming teeming populations, that they in turn may have strength to fulfil their own appointed tasks.

Price Factors

Following factors have tended to decrease supply or increase demand: Wheat acreage of the four principal wheat producing countries of 1942 is estimated at 104 million acres, down 11 million from 1941 -- U.S. Lower House has refused passage of bill to permit sale of 125 million bushels of Government wheat below parity -- Canadian visible supplies of wheat dropped 51/2 million bushels last week to 413 million bushels (last year 469 million bushels).

Following factors have tended to increase supply or decrease demand: U.S. winter and spring wheat crop prospects continue excellent -- Growing conditions over western Canada are generally good -- More favorable weather in Western Europe recently has improved new crop prospects

SAVE YOUR VITAMINS

Saving vitamins is one of the important things that housewives must look to in preparing food, states Vera D. Richards, of the Agricultural Extension Service.

Women everywhere are waging a war on waste and they are well aware of the importance of saving food—but it is every bit as important to save food values. The minerals and vitamins that give us steadier nerves, better appetite, more pep and a cheerier outlook on life are too valuable to neglect or pour down the sink. There's nothing very complicated in saving them in well balanced proportions if you keep the following tips in mind:

1. Remember that exposure to heat, air and liquid tend to destroy some vitamins, so cook vegetables particularly as quickly as possible in covered pans with the least amount of water possible.

2. Baking in the skin or steaming saves more food value than boiling.

3. Pare vegetables thinly, never leave to soak in water, and drop into boiling, not cold water.

4. Add the salt just a minute before taking off or even after—cooking vegetables with salt increases loss of important minerals into the water.

5. Save vegetable water for gravies, soups and sauces.

6. Soda destroys Vitamin C—cream of tomato soup can be made without soda—add cold tomato in warm milk, heat over low fire and do not allow to boil. Serve immediately.

7. Cook only enough vegetables for a meal—reheating means greater loss of food values.

Young beet greens, turnip greens, dandelion leaves and lambs' quarters are tasty and rich sources of iron and vitamins.

to every Household in Canada*

Canadians will be required to register so that ration cards, good for the 10 week period, commencing July 1st, may be issued immediately. At the end of that period a coupon ration book, good for six months, will be issued

HOW TO REGISTER

Residents in Urban Areas not served by Letter Carrier, and Residents in Rural Areas

Application cards will be distributed to all householders through the post offices on or before Tuesday, June 23rd. Additional cards will also be delivered for every person resident in the household who bears a different last name from the head of the household. If needed, extra cards may be secured from local post offices.

These application cards should be filled out immediately and dropped in the nearest mail box or post office. A pamphlet giving complete instructions will be delivered with each card. Coupon Rationing for Sugar Becomes Effective July 1st

Beginning July 1st, no one will be permitted to buy sugar for regular domestic use without a ration coupon.

Prompt co-operation on the part of the public in filling out and returning their application cards is necessary to ensure return of the ration coupon card in time to purchase sugar on or after the above date.

Catching a Thief. Mr. Walter S. Campbell, regional representative in Alberta for the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, points out that the ration regulations make it compulsory station operators must satisfy themselves that the vehicle for which gasoline is requested is the one described on the ration book.

There are penalties for non-observance of the regulations and there are advantages in observing them. A stolen automobile was identified by a sharp-eyed woman attendant in Alberta two weeks ago, when the thief tried to get gasoline for it without producing the coupon-book.

Beef Control Plan. Under a new plan of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board to ensure adequate supplies of beef at home, while giving beef producers the equivalent of the export price for their cattle, Canada is now divided into fifteen zones. In each zone, wholesale price will be set by a Food Corporation, headed by the Food Administrator, Hon. Gordon Taggart. These prices will be adjusted from time to time with seasonal variations. Retail prices will be based on the laid-down prices, plus the mark-up established by the retailer for similar cuts and quality during the basic period.

FOOD FOR FIGHTING MEN

Good nourishing food, and plenty of it, is still an essential part of the soldier's equipment. In producing enormous quantities of foodstuffs for our fighters, for armament workers, for the people of Britain and other embattled countries, Canadian farmers are engaged in a vital war work.

Paratroop Leader Awarded Bar To Distinguished Service Cross

Wing Cmdr. Percy Pickard, tall blond pipe-smoking pilot who led the paratroop raid on Bruneval in February, was awarded the Bar to the Distinguished Service Cross.

The citation said that "by his courage, self-sacrifice and devotion to duty he set an example which, although attained by few, is admired by all."

At the time of the Bruneval raid Pickard commanded a Whitley squadron which included a number of Canadians, whom he called "very good airmen."

The parachutists led by Pickard destroyed a German radio aircraft location unit at Bruneval, 12 miles north of Havre. The parachutists fought their way to the beaches and returned across the Channel on light craft escorted by warships and planes. Heavy casualties were inflicted on the Germans and some prisoners taken. British casualties were light.

Nothing To Give

Hitler Cannot Promise Anything For Use Of Bulgaria's Army

W. K. Kelsey, in the Detroit News, says reports of a pending revolution in Bulgaria are probably premature. King Boris still has cards to play in the game with Hitler. Certainly Hitler would like to use the Bulgarian army; but what can he promise Bulgaria in return? If he offers her an outlet to the Aegean, through Greece, he offends the Turks mightily, and it is to his present interest to keep Turkey neutral at least, and gain her friendship if possible. If he offers her Rumanian land, he makes the Rumanians, already fighting mad at Hungary, angrier still. He can't bring much economic pressure to Bulgaria, as she is a self-supporting agricultural country. So what is there to use as bait for Boris? If the King sits tight, he sits pretty.

The report of trouble seems to be due to rumors that Boris is not sitting tight; but it will prove remarkable if he sells himself for nothing.

Newspaper Statistics

35th Edition McKim's Directory Of Canadian Publications Just Off Press

Canada has now 1,811 publications, of which 953 are weeklies and 107 dailies, according to the 35th edition of McKim's Directory of Canadian Publications, just off the press.

During the past year, the dailies have decreased by five and the weeklies by 31, while 20 monthlies and 23 miscellaneous publications have been added to the list. Suspension of Canada's two Japanese dailies narrows the Japanese language press in this country to one weekly, while the Chinese continue to lead among the dailies in the total of 66 foreign language publications in 16 different tongues, with four dailies of their own, two in Toronto and two in British Columbia.

"Necessary curbs on consumption and the re-directing of productive capacities to the service of the war machine have necessitated a shift in emphasis which changes the nature rather than restricts the scope of advertising," says C. T. Pearce, President of A. McKim Limited, in his foreword to the directory, which comprises 483 pages, and includes exhaustive data on markets throughout the Dominion. "Those who, with their eyes on the post-war world, take the necessary steps to maintain and increase the goodwill created by consistent advertising will find themselves in the best position to cope with circumstances when peace comes."

Should Save Fats

Found That Fats Are Still Wasted In The Home Kitchens

Saving and conserving what is at hand to relieve pressure on materials time and labor directed to the prosecution of the war is the fundamental note in the whole salvage program.

In tests conducted in the kitchens of the Consumer Section, Department of Agriculture, in poultry, beef, lamb and pork fats, indications showed that one way in which fats is wasted is in the failure to recover and use cooking fats in the home.

Chicken fats as well as fresh pork fats were found to make effective shortening agents. Chicken fat with its bland flavor and soft texture is ready for use immediately on being rendered, but smoked pork fat could be used for more purposes if clarified.

In rendering fat for cooking, the best results were obtained where the excess fat was removed from the meat before it was cooked. Chicken and beef fats rendered in this way could be used without clarifying.

A bulletin on rendering and clarifying and other information concerning use of fats available in the home, in addition to recipes for the use of each is available from the Consumer Section, Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

First Time In History

Large Number Of Women Working In Britain's Royal Mint

Women are making coins in Britain's Royal Mint for the first time in its centuries of history. Now numbering nearly a quarter of the total workpeople, they have thoroughly learnt the process of coining. First they were put on the "overlooking" machine, with its slowly moving belt on which the newly-minted coins are spread out for inspection. Then the women went to the presses, which in one operation impress the blank coinage on both sides and, in some coins, mill round the edge.

Why is it that the drivers who never are going anywhere always want to get there quickest? 2467

NUTRITION CAMPAIGN

In one Canadian city, Montreal, 10,000 women are attending the lecture course of the "Food for Health—Health for Victory" nutrition campaign. Six thousand of the women are French-Canadian, the remainder are English. The lectures run for four weeks. Trained dietitians are giving their time freely.

The importance of milk, cheese, fruit and vegetables in the daily diet provided the theme of this week's lectures. Milk was described as the most important food in the diet—a food for which no other single substitute could be found.

Canadians do not eat enough cheese, it was stated. The average yearly consumption is between only three and four pounds, and it should be about ten pounds. At present with the vast export of cheese to Britain—112 million pounds were shipped over last year—there is a scarcity of cheese in the country but once the world gets back to normal it was hoped that more cheese would be eaten here.

The popular idea that cheese is indigestible was cleared up by the lecturers. Cheese is a highly concentrated food and should therefore not be eaten as an extra snack but as part of the meal. For instance, it might be used once a week as a substitute for meat or fish. Another good way to work it into the diet would be to round out a meal in which the main course was a salad.

As little cooking as possible was advocated as the secret of good vegetable cookery, also as little water as possible. And the cooking water should be kept and used as a vegetable juice drink or in soups and sauces. The reason for this is that some of the valuable vitamins and minerals dissolve out into the water during cooking.

The time-honored custom of preparing vegetables ahead for cooking and leaving them soaking in cold water was denounced by the lecturers as a way of getting rid of vitamins. If prepared ahead vegetables should be put in a covered dish—without water—in the ice box until it was time to cook them. Canned and frozen vegetables had as high a vitamin content as fresh ones, it was stated, unless the fresh ones came straight from the garden to the stove.

Fruit of some sort, fresh, canned, or dried, should form part of each day's diet and children should be given dried fruit instead of candy. Everyone should have two ounces of orange juice (a quarter of a measuring cup) or four ounces of tomato juice a day.

ANNE TEDLOCK BROOKS

CHAPTER XXV.

"Miss Tamar Randolph Kidnapped," the headlines were in startling black, splashed over every major paper of the South the next morning.

With the exception of the green suede glove found at the scene of the junction of the Cricket Hill Road, there were no clues. Other headlines played up prominently in the same paper were the holdup of the armored truck and robbery of the gold bars from the amalgamation mill at the mine.

Ransome Todd and Knox Randolph paced the verandah. On the terrace stood groups of newspaper men talking in low tones. Police guarded the entrance of the lane and strode around the big sprawling white house. Phoebe and Aristotle moved silently about in the kitchen. Excepting for coffee, none of the breakfast had been touched.

Ransome's face was chalk white, and Tamar's father looked as though he were on the verge of collapse. Neither had made any attempt to lie down during the night. They had been in council with Taylor and employees of the mine and Major Towne.

Ranny had already made a frantic trip to the old swimming hole on the bank of the Chestatee River where Tamar had seen the Major and the man called Nick. There had been no traces of anything out of the ordinary. The plans had been changed since Tamar heard them discussing some mysterious hideout, he concluded.

It was almost dark when Ranny drove into the weed-grown track of the little rutted road that led into the picnic grounds of Whiffle Creek where the old mill stood. As he followed the road, he could see the lovely face of Tamar beside him, and feel her presence as of the day they had spent there. He felt numb, as though all life had stopped and that living would never again be possible, until she returned safely.

Ranny could see that nothing about the place had the appearance of having been recently visited. He sprang out of the car, followed by a policeman and Knox Randolph. Recent rain had washed the old deck clean of all the old tracks, and he noticed there were no new ones. He opened the creaky door cautiously. The gloomy weather was silent and empty.

The policeman ran his big flashlight over the place, and the beam picked out the walls alone. The crude furniture had been removed and the room was barren.

"Taylor has had this place watched!" Ransome exclaimed. "When the furniture have been removed?"

"Maybe it's another part of the old mill," suggested the officer.

But a hasty examination proved that nothing was in the storage rooms and bins and the rotting boards testified that no one could have safely used them.

They had gone back then to Shadwell. It was almost dark when they reached the place, and Ranny noted again the darkies down by the old slave quarters, huddled as they were the day of Maris' death. This agony of suspense was heartbreaking; not knowing that Tamar was safe, or even alive was torture to Ranny.

All night they had listened to stories of different employees of the Cricket Hill.

Major Towne was so bewildered over Tamar's disappearance that even Ransome believed that he knew nothing of her whereabouts. He brought Marigold Fetten and her father to Shadwell, there to confront the Major with her story, and to repeat to the Major the story that Fetten himself had given him about the test ore that was taken out of the mine in February.

As he strode about on the wide porch this morning Ranny remembered how well Towne had played his cards last night. He spoke so convincingly that even Ranny wondered how he could be so expertly. It was with satisfaction that he saw Towne and Fetten both taken away to be held for questioning.

Phoebe appeared in the doorway. "Mist' Ranny!" she called.

Ranny did not hear her, he was so deep in his thoughts. He felt the tug on his arm and finally looked up. "Yes, Phoebe?"

"No. And he's all broken up over it, too."

On sudden inspiration Ranny ran up the stairs to Dick's office. "Do you know anything about that engineer, Dick?" he burst into the room.

Dick whirled away from the window where he had been observing a cold world outside. He looked worn, too. "You mean Sande? No, Ran. I don't know anything about him. Would Selby? I'll call her." He picked up the telephone and gave the number.

"Wait, yes. Yes, central. Yes, he's here. What is it?"

Ransome disinterestedly pulled the telephone out of Dick's hand. "What is it?" he shouted hoarsely.

In a few minutes Ransome, Dick strode into the house and called the inn where Christopher Sande lived. All work had been suspended at the mine until further orders, he knew. The desk clerk answered with a sleepy voice.

"What time?" Ransome asked sharply.

"It was early. He had breakfast in the coffee shop and left right after. His mail and key are still in the box."

"If he comes in today, please have him call me." Ransome gave the Shadwell number and hastened back out to Tamar's father.

"Sande left his room yesterday with luggage, right after breakfast, and hasn't been back. Was he supposed to be on the job at the Cricket Hill yesterday?"

"As far as I know he was. But we could find out from Towne, Oh. Ransome, I don't like to throw any suspicion on that young engineer. He seemed like such a fine man. He couldn't be connected with this, I'm sure."

"Let's check every possible clue," Ransome said grimly. "Why should we let him get by just because he has a pleasing personality? We've spared none of the other employees."

"Very well. Of course you're right about asking; but I'll wager that he was out of town on business or gone East for the week-end."

In another moment they had left in Ransome's car, faces a little more alert with the hope of finding something definite.

The drowsiness of the little town of Tahlahneka had given way to an undercurrent of excitement. Knots of people stood about looking questioningly at the courthouse. As Knox Randolph and Ransome Todd hurried across the green of the lawn into the old white building, they nodded each other, voices raised in speculation.

Towne would not talk. "I don't know where Sande went. I'm not responsible for the movements of all the employees at the mine. I don't know anything about him and I won't give you any information concerning where he might be."

Ransome said: "You've heard of lynchings, haven't you? We seem like a pleasant little town here in Tahlahneka. Outside this building stand a group of 50 men which would grow to a hundred in five minutes. I might just possibly let them take you, Major."

Major Towne's face grew livid. "I'm going to sue you for having me held, Todd."

Randolph's face hardened. "Major Towne, if you can give us any light on the disappearance of my daughter, I advise you not to withhold it any longer. Certain things are going to come to light at the trial that look bad for you. Kidnapping is a Federal offense you understand."

"I've had nothing to do with your daughter's disappearance. Why didn't she stay at home instead of gallivanting over the country on that mare?"

"You know, then, about the mare?"

The Major stared at Ransome. "I don't know anything." He closed his lips firmly and refused to reopen them.

In another moment Ransome and Randolph turned away and hurried out of the gloomy place that housed the jail. It was an annex to the courthouse and could be reached only through the main corridor of the building.

"I'll go to my office for a moment and see if any message has come in there. Want to come along with me?" Ransome asked the older man. He studied his face. Randolph looked broken with the strain of the night.

As they entered the bank building they heard a step at the top of the stairs. It was Dr. Forrester. He called to the men. "Wait, Ransome. Hello, Knox. I just came up to see if Dick had heard anything."

"Has Dick heard anything?" The note in Randolph's voice had a piteous plea.

"No. And he's all broken up over it, too."

On sudden inspiration Ranny ran up the stairs to Dick's office. "Do you know anything about that engineer, Dick?" he burst into the room.

Dick whirled away from the window where he had been observing a cold world outside. He looked worn, too. "You mean Sande? No, Ran. I don't know anything about him. Would Selby? I'll call her." He picked up the telephone and gave the number.

Ransome disinterestedly pulled the telephone out of Dick's hand. "What is it?" he shouted hoarsely.

In a few minutes Ransome, Dick

strode into the house and called the inn where Christopher Sande lived. All work had been suspended at the mine until further orders, he knew. The desk clerk answered with a sleepy voice.

"What time?" Ransome asked sharply.

"It was early. He had breakfast in the coffee shop and left right after. His mail and key are still in the box."

"If he comes in today, please have him call me." Ransome gave the Shadwell number and hastened back out to Tamar's father.

GET YOUR SMILE BACK

* When jumpy, overstimulated nerves make you grumpy, irritable, maybe it's time to give your nerves a rest from the stimulating effects of the caffeine and tannin you get in your mealtime beverages. Time you discovered a grand, new mealtime drink, too—in a cup of delicious Postum. So, if you are jumpy—overstimulated—switch to Postum—it contains no drugs, it gives your nerves a chance to rest.

Relax with a cup of delicious Postum—drink as much as you like—as often as you like. It's a great nightcap, too. Try Postum.

and Knox Randolph were roaring out of town. Dick had not waited to be invited but had followed Ransome down the stairs. He grabbed Knox's arm and without a word they piled into the car.

"What is it?" Dick shouted as they skidded around a bend.

"Some farmer out on the Duck Point road called to say he saw an airplane leave the field south of his place yesterday afternoon about five. He didn't know that any had landed there, and was suspicious. He just heard about Tamar and the hold-up, and thought there might be some connection."

If Tamar had been kidnapped and was being held for ransom, her father kept thinking as they sped along, why hadn't there been a message demanding money?

EAT SMALL OBJECTS

Only the whale has a larger mouth than the hippopotamus, yet both these animals devour only small objects. The hippo eats reeds and river grasses, while the whale feeds on small crustaceans.

HOME SERVICE

LOVELY WEDDING NEED NOT BE EXPENSIVE

Plan In Advance

Although the war forbids extravagance, you can have a lovely wedding. It doesn't take money. The important thing is to know what's correct.

"Such a beautiful wedding!" They will say that of yours, if you plan it right, whether formal or informal.

The formal bride looks lovely in her bridal gown and veil, but you may look lovely, too, marrying informally in suit and hat.

The groom's clothes are in key, tailcoat and striped trousers for a formal afternoon wedding or business clothes for an informal one.

On the bride's budget will be invitations, refreshments, music and expenses at the church. The groom's will include the license and the ring, the fee for the clergyman.

Our 32-page booklet explains all the etiquette of expenses, describes every detail of correct formal and informal wedding dress for bride, groom, attendants and guests. Tells etiquette for ceremony and reception.

Send 15¢ in coins for your copy of "Planning and Budgeting Your Wedding" to Home Service Dept., Winnipeg Newspaper Union, 175 McDermot Ave. E., Winnipeg, Man. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Cry "Send Us Smokes" Helped By Gift Of 2,000,000 Cigarettes

A total of two million cigarettes will be distributed among Canadians in land, sea and air forces now on active service overseas, as a gift from The Dodds Medicine Company Limited, Toronto, maker of Dodds' Kidney Pills.

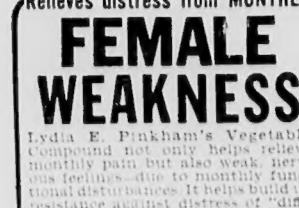

This is understood to be one of the largest individual gifts of Canadian-made cigarettes to the Canadian Forces on active service overseas, and distribution will be carried out through the facilities of the Overseas League (Canada) Tobacco Fund, Toronto.

From all parts of Canada money is collected and cigarettes sent to all branches of the service overseas at the rate of 16 packages of 25 cigarettes each for $1.00. With each package goes an addressed post card with the donor's name and hundreds of thousands have been returned to Canada and the United States by grateful men of the air force, navy, army and merchant marine. Any amount is acceptable and carefully administered by the Overseas League Tobacco Fund, King Edward Hotel, Toronto. This is volunteer work and the Governor-General, Lord Athlone, is leading patron in Canada.

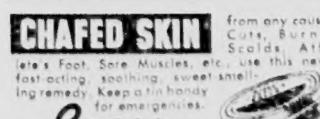

STILL A STRONG POWER

France's streamlined army of 350,000 troops at home and in the colonies, 1,000 first-line fighting planes, and a navy of 90 surface warships and about 60 submarines make her still the fourth strongest power on the European continent despite the clipping of her wings by the 1940 armistice.
